

Andinkera Cloth Crafts from World Cultures

Andinkera was a king in Africa who wore robes covered with intricate designs. During a battle, King Andinkera was killed by the Ashanti, who took his robe as a trophy. Today, African clothing is often printed with Andinkera symbols. The colourful printed cloth is worn for many occasions by both men and women and is considered an elegant form of dress.

This international craft can help you complete parts of the program.

Materials: sticky back foam; wood block; ink pad; craft knife or scissors; cloth or paper.

